Description

Summary

The Daniel O'Connell House is located at the southeast corner of North Union and East Third Streets in the village of Vermont in southwestern Fulton County, Illinois. The two-story, frame Four Square house was built in 1928 by local contractor, Fred Rankin. The house faces west towards North Union Street. The sun room and vestibule was originally enclosed. The front entry to the north of the sun room has a small porch. A two car, wood-framed garage built in 1928 is located to the southeast of the house. It is a contributing building. The neighborhood is classified as a residential/commercial mix with the commercial downtown one half block to the west. Houses are located to the south and east of the building and business buildings are located to the north and west.

The house has a low-pitched, asphalt shingled hipped roof with a wide overhanging roof. Windows throughout the house are double-hung, Craftsman styled with the upper sash having a large centered pane with four small corner panes, and vertical and horizontal panes set between the corner panes. The lower sash is one large pane of glass. There is a brick, full basement. A red brick chimney is located on the north elevation of the house towards the west.

Exterior

The front, west elevation of the house has a large one-story original extension to the main two-story block of the house. It has a low pitched hip roof and encloses the sun room to the south and the entry and porch to the north. The entry porch has a corner brick pier extending up from the foundation to the roof. The entry is recessed underneath the extension roof. Immediately to the south of the entry on the north wall of the sun room is a single window. Along the first story of the west elevation is a bank of six windows that light the sun room. Above on the second story are two evenly spaced windows.

At the west end first story of the south elevation is a bank of three windows. A doorway at ground level to the east provides access to the basement. A shed roof overhang protects the doorway. To the east of this doorway at the first story is a bank of two smaller kitchen windows. An original enclosed one-story porch extends to the east rear. It has an entry door and a window to the east along the south elevation. At the west end of the second story is a single window. Above the basement entry is a window providing light to the staircase. To the east is a bank of two windows and a smaller window.

The east elevation has the small porch and breakfast nook extension at the south and a small window bay for the built-in sideboard to the north. At the south end of the first story is a bank of five various sized windows that light the porch and breakfast nook. To the north is a bank of four small windows in the sideboard extension. A bank of two, two-light windows are located directly below in the basement. At the south end of the second story is a small window, to the north are two evenly spaced windows.

At the east end of the basement level of the north elevation is a bank of two, two-light windows. To the west are two, two-light windows. At the east end of the first story is a bank of two windows. To the west are two smaller windows that flank the fireplace chimney. At the second story are two evenly spaced windows.

Interior

The interior of the house follows a Four-Square plan with open rooms. There is a slight variation of the type as the entryway projects from the main body of the house and it is located in front of the living room instead of at the side. Upon entering the front door is a small vestibule with a closet to the south. A glass and wood door leads to the large living room. Floors throughout the first and second floor are narrow, pine or poplar floors. The woodwork is stained pine or poplar. The doorways and windows have entablatures. Walls and ceilings throughout the house are plaster.

The living room extends the full width of the house from north to south. A red brick fireplace is located along the north wall. Built-in wood shelving with glass and wood doors is located on either side of the fireplace. On the west wall are four large French doors with the same window pattern as the upper sashes of the exterior windows. The French doors fold to provide access into the sun room. At the southeast corner of the living room is the staircase. It has panelled walls with battens. Below the staircase is a built-in bench with panelling and battens. There are crown moldings in this room.

The dining room is located to the east of the living room through a large flat-arched opening. The opening has a pair of French doors that are identical to the French doors leading to the sun room. They are currently being revarnished as they were damaged by water leaks and will be rehung in this opening. On the east wall of the dining room is a built-in recessed sideboard. On either side of the sideboard are built-in wood shelves with wood and glass doors. Above the sideboard are four small windows. The sideboard and windows project out from the main block of the house. The dining room has crown moldings.

The kitchen is accessed through a glass wood door with two lower wood panels from the south wall of the dining room or through a wood door from the east wall of the living room. There is a small half-bath located underneath the main staircase in the hallway to the kitchen from the living room. East of the kitchen is a small breakfast nook with three windows and a small enclosed porch to the southeast. A doorway on the west wall of the kitchen leads to the basement stairs.

The basement occupies the main block of the house and has a boiler and storage areas. The second floor has a centrally located hall with rooms to the west, north and east. There are two bedrooms located to the west. They are nearly identical in size and have a sliding pocket door connecting them. Closets are located north of the hall. To the northeast is bedroom. To the east is a full bath and to the southeast is a small room with a closet. There is an attic located above the second story. It is not finished.

Garage

The one-story, two car garage is wood-framed and has a gabled roof with clipped gables. There is a pent roof over the west elevation garage door. The original garage doors were replaced by a modern fiberglass door. The south elevation has two windows one-over-one windows similar in styling to the house. The east elevation has a centrally located window. The north elevation has a door to the east and a window to the west. The interior of the garage is one big room with a concrete floor. The walls are not finished. It is a contributing building

Statement of Significance

The Daniel O'Connell House is locally significant for listing in the National Register of Historic Places. The house meets Criterion C for architecture as a good example of a recognized type, a Four Square House with some Craftsman features. With its nearly square shape, hipped roof, sun room, and open plan, the Daniel O'Connell House is a good example of the Four Square type. The house is a variation of the Four Square type with an original sun room and vestibule extension from the main block of the house reminiscent of the front porch massing found on a Four Square house. Craftsman features on the home include the porch's massive brick piers and an interior with many built-ins including seating by the stairs, bookcases, and a dining room side board. The period of significance is 1928 the year the house and garage were built. The Daniel O'Connell House meets the registration requirements of the single dwelling type in the "Architectural and Historic Resources of Vermont, Illinois" Multiple Property Documentation Form.

Architecture

For discussion of vernacular and popular types and the Four Square type, please refer to the Multiple Property Documentation Form, "Architectural and Historic Resources of Vermont, Illinois." The Four Square type was popularized during the early 1900s. The type was characterized by its massiveness and square or nearly square shape. Four Square houses are generally two stories high, set on a raised basement, and have a porch usually running the full width of the first story. Four Square types sometimes have a front dormer, a hipped roof, and an interior plan of four equal spaced rooms including an entry hall or vestibule, or three unequal spaced rooms with no entry hall.¹

The Four Square type was known for its plainness that epitomized America at the turn of the century which was striving for "the comfortable house." The Four Square type appeared during a time when public and upper class architecture was influenced by Beaux Arts classicism, the modest homes of the middle class achieved a simplicity and honesty that had not been seen for almost 100 years. Public taste was undergoing a reaction to the decorative exuberance of the Victorian era, and was turning to plain unadorned simple materials and surfaces. This new plain simplicity was found not only in the Four Square but in other house types including Gable Front and Bungalow.²

Plan books and house companies of the time stressed its American style and massiveness and virtually every mail-order company between 1900 and 1925 offered Four Square models. Stylistic influences on this house type could be found on the front porch and at the cornice line. Many Four Squares often reflected Classical, Prairie, or Craftsman styles.

The Daniel O'Connell House is a good example of the type with some Prairie School and Craftsman influences. Although the first story facade of the house is not symmetrical, it conveys an overall impression of balance and symmetry. Its wide front piers and horizontal emphasis give it a feeling of massiveness commonly found in Four Square types. Its floor plan with three major spaces lined by large openings is also typical of the Four Square. In both its broad horizontality and detailing the house reflects some Craftsman influences. From the front, the house is wider than it is tall. The massive brick piers framing the horizontal opening reinforces the horizontality of the general rectangular shape of the house. The windows of the enclosed sun room give the feeling of a horizontal band. The low-pitched hipped roof and wide overhanging eaves of the main roof and porch roof also give the house a horizontal feel.

Horizontality and geometric detailing, typical of the Craftsman style is emphasized on the home's interior. The rooms are large and flow into each other through large horizontal openings. Geometric patterns are everywhere in the front door, built-ins on the sides of the fireplace, in the French doors to the sun room, and built-ins in the dining room. The staircase has simple wood panels with vertical battens and a built-in bench for seating.

Two other Four Square houses are located in Vermont. The B. F. Bader House at 301 North Main was built in 1907. The two-story frame house has a rock-faced concrete block foundation. The flared hipped roof has hipped roof dormers. Wood Tuscan columns support the full facade porch. A small projecting pavilion extends at the center of the front facade and contains the central entry. The interior has a four room plan with a switchback staircase located to the south side of the house. The staircase projects to the south with a small three-sided two story window bay. The home recently has had a number of changes including the covering over of windows in the second story front extension and replacement of windows on the north exterior by small octagonal windows. Some of the wood clapboard siding has also been recently replaced.

The Edith Chipman House at 201 West Third Street has many traits of the Four Square type with some Classical detailing but has a Four-over-Four plan. The large two story frame house was built in 1912. It has a central doorway with rooms on either side of a central hall. The house has a hipped roof with hipped roof dormers. Four wood Tuscan columns mounted on high brick walls support the full facade porch. The front facade has a symmetrical layout with three bays.

History

Daniel O'Connell was born in Chicago in 1861 or 1862. Later he and his family moved to Little York, Warren County, Illinois. On December 22, 1887, he married Tessie Hettrick in Galesburg, Illinois. Tessie Hettrick was the daughter of William and Helen Brand Hettrick.

In 1890 Daniel O'Connell bought Samuel Farr's east side lumber yard in Vermont, and built up the lumber business located on the north side of East Third Street east of North Union Street.³ In the late 1910s, O'Connell became a major stockholder in the People's State Bank. Following the retirement of Walter Wyne as president of the bank, O'Connell became president of the People's State Bank in January 1924.⁴

On February 14, 1928 Tessie O'Connell passed away. In April 1928, wishing to devote more time to his work at the bank and his personal life, O'Connell sold the lumber yard to the Pioneer Lumber Company of Dallas City, Illinois.⁵

In the spring of 1928, Daniel O'Connell decided to build a new house for himself. Local contractor Fred Rankin, who built a number of homes in Vermont was selected for the general contract while Harvey Brinton was in charge of the masonry work. For a discussion of the building career of Fred Rankin please refer to the Multiple Property Documentation Form, "Architectural and Historic Resources of Vermont, Illinois."

The spring and summer 1928 editions of the Vermont Union had many items about the construction of the large home for Daniel O'Connell.

The April 27, 1928 issue announced, "The work of excavating the new drain tile is now in progress for D. O'Connell's new house."

May 4, 1928. "Banker D. O'Connell has let the contract for a fine new residence to Fred Rankin. The house is to be located on the corner lot where the old picture gallery stood for so many years and the work of excavating the basement and drain is now in progress. The bricks are being placed on the ground."

May 18, 1928. "The work of laying the foundation for D. O'Connell's new residence has commenced. Harvey Brinton is the mason for the work." (Harvey Brinton was also building a new gas station for himself at the same time at the southeast side of the village square.)

May 29, 1928. "A large force of men are at work on the D. O'Connell house. The garage is about completed."

June 8, 1928. "This week Harvey Brinton and a force of workmen built a new outside chimney at the D. O'Connell house."

June 12, 1928. "Work is progressing nicely on D. O'Connell's new house. Most of the frame work is now up. The garage is enclosed and the roof finished. An oil burner will be used for heating the house."

October 23, 1928. "D. O'Connell has moved into his fine new property just east of the business district."

Daniel O'Connell married Mrs Olive B. Walter of Peoria, Illinois in Rushville, Illinois on Sunday, March 10, 1929. The People's State Bank failed in 1932 and the O'Connells moved to Galesburg. On June 23, 1936, Daniel O'Connell died at his residence at 1347 West Main Street in Galesburg, Illinois.⁶

A number of tenants occupied the house including Harry Kost, owner of Kost Grocery in the 1930s and 1940s. Later, Russell Kost, owner of the Kost Funeral Home purchased the house and leased it out. His son, Bruce Kost and family occupied the house during the 1980s and early 1990s. In 1994 Dennis and Patricia Beske purchased the house and garage. Dennis is retired from the U. S. Navy and is attending Western Illinois University. Patricia is an employee of Western Illinois University.
